Dear Roy:

Thank you for your prompt response to the recent idea of the book review service. I am glad to know that you can serve as one of our reviewers, even if only occasionally. Simply keep the review in mind and as you read books that you think would be of interest to an informed laity, ~~try to~~ take the time to write a stimulating review.

The idea about abstracts is an excellent one. I don't know why I didn't think of it. I have read in times past New Testament Abstracts very carefully. It is an excellent model for such a service. I think we will be able to incorporate it and will certainly use Restoration Quarterly and Mission as two of our sources, along with several other journals outside the brotherhood that I am reading every week.

I am glad to know that Randy Becton made the February issue of Mission. I think it is the kind of thing that can further serious thought on the local church level of Mission readers.

Thanks again for your help.

Your brother,

John Allen Chalk
